Dear Sir/Madam,

It has been brought to our attention that a letter from the BRE dated 14 August 2011 has been distributed to companies within the industry by a competitor of YBS. The BRE letter incorrectly states that there are technical inaccuracies in the YBS Superquilt technical literature and calculations. However, it has since been confirmed that the matters stated in the BRE's letter of 14 August were based upon incorrect documentation having been provided to it and hence the problems with the results.

The BRE has since declared that it's letter of 14 August 2011 should now be disregarded as it is clear to it that the information upon which it was based was out of date . A copy of the BRE's letter to this effect is attached.

The BRE has also informed YBS that its original communication was not intended for commercial use.

We would like to apologise for the confusion created by the BRE letter of the 14 August 2011 and we can assure all of our customers that YBS Superquilt meets all required EN regulations and is fully compliant with UK building regulations.

Superquilt has a certificate of agrément, tested to all required EN standards by an accredited testing institute that is acknowledged by UKAS, the Superquilt certificate of agrément meets all of the requirements for use in the UK and every EU member state/country.

The SuperQuilt Certification and Technical Literature are both available for download on the YBS website (www.ybsinsulation.com) and our technical team are available to take any technical questions if you should require.

YBS Insulation pride ourselves in the integrity of our technical support, product quality and customer service. Technical representation is always available for CPD seminars and product guidance should you require.

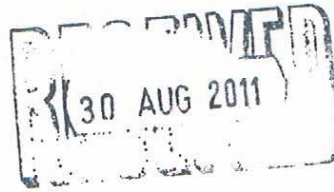

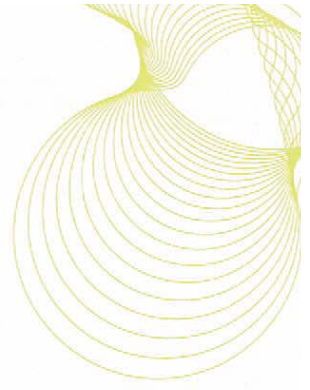

Kind regards

Tony Reed

Dear Tony

YBS SuperQuilt – under rafter application

The information and calculations relating to your product Superquilt in our letter from BRE Scotland to Web Dynamics, reference HCT008/272092 and dated 14 August 2011, was based on information provided to us at the time by Web Dynamics. However, having reviewed the updated information provided by you that relates to your product Superquilt as described in the current YBS brochure reference YBS 200 V13 08/2011, it is clear that the information from Web Dynamics, on which our letter was based, requires to be updated and our letter to them amended accordingly. Consequently, the BRE letter to Web Dynamics, reference HCT008/272092 and dated 14 August 2011, should be disregarded.

Yours sincerely

Brian Anderson
